UN air-raids destroyed the North Korean gasoline dumps in Pakch'ŏn (125-35, 39-44); the North Koreans constructed new fuel warehouses about 3 1/2 kilometers west of Pakch'ŏn at Songsan (sic) for maintaining highway transportation on the western trunk highway of North Korea. This new fuel dump consists of five warehouses constructed in separate tunnels 50 meters long and 10 meters wide which have been dug into the foot of the mountain just east of Songsan. These storage tunnels are about 50 meters apart and are lined with concrete; each tunnel has an entrance which is guarded by an iron door. A road runs straight from these tunnels to Pakch'ŏn. Since this is the largest fuel dump in the vicinity of Sinanju (125-36, 39-36), it is strongly guarded; one company of troops is garrisoned in the area and 8 anti-aircraft machine-guns have been placed on top of the mountain.
